

Kennedy discusses missionary work

Elder David M. Kennedy currently serves as Special Representative of the First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Throughout his life he has held numerous positions, including Secretary of the United States Treasury and Ambassador to the United Nations. Last week Erik Schimmelbusch had the opportunity to interview him concerning his current assignment for the LDS Church.

Daily Universe: Elder Kennedy, I understand that as Special Representative of the First Presidency, you represent the LDS Church throughout the world. Could you briefly describe what your position entails?

Kennedy: It's mainly acting as ambassador-at-large for the Church. The effort being made in missionary work is to get the Church established so that the message of the Lord, the Savior, can go to all people everywhere.

In some areas we have to get approval of the governments and recognition so that our missionaries can teach the true principles of the Gospel.

Daily Universe: Which countries have you visited recently and what has been your experience there?

Kennedy: Well, I've visited many countries; just recently I returned from Thailand and Taiwan and of course there we have missionaries and we have churches and buildings — we're getting along quite well.

I just had some very good information this morning, which made me very happy. We are recognized in Czechoslovakia as of now. We have members of the Church there, who have been brought into the Church through missionary work with Brother Toronto and other mission presidents.

During the Russian occupation of Czechoslovakia we were not permitted to meet, but because of the efforts that have been made in Eastern Europe toward freedom and openness, we are now recognized. That makes me very happy, because the Czech people are such good, refined, thoughtful people.

We are recognized in Poland and have missionaries and workers there. In that area of the world it is working and now we have a temple in the (German Democratic Republic) and we have missionaries going into the GDR, which we never had before. It is moving toward freedom — it's a God-given privilege. Our people are being well received. We are now in 116 countries.

Anyone would think that religion would be on the back burner in Eastern Europe because they want to have work and produce, but the people are basically a religious people and they have been kept from that all this time. There is an anxious movement in many of those countries.

Daily Universe: What can you say about the Soviet Union, as far as the missionary work going on there now, or possibilities in the future?

Kennedy: We have no missionaries in the Soviet Union. We have been working with different people of the Soviet Union, but now that things are changing, work will be done. I would have thought that would have been many years in the future. But still we have to be very careful because we don't want to upset other things that are being developed in NATO and the joining of the two sides of Germany together.

We have to go in and get approval and do it in a way that we'll be recognized by the Russian people. This can be done, but it will have to be done gradually.

Daily Universe: What does it take to help governments overcome their prejudices against the Church, for example in Portugal, Thailand and in Ghana?

Kennedy: We need to just tell them the truth. Our people believe in obeying and sustaining the law. We want our citizens to be good citizens of the land in which they live, and they should serve their country and their people and they should be in high moral conditions.

When we talk to them about what their country needs, we can explain to them what is happening in this country, and what our church has been doing, and how we are functioning. Most of them will listen.

I think now that there are changes toward democracy, that kind of thing will be of great help.

I'm just enthusiastic. Never in my life have I seen things happen so far, so complete, so quickly as we've seen in this dramatic movement in the last several months.

DOUBLE HILLS?
THINK OF THE COSTS!

Alternatives for a BYU summer peace corps

The idea is compelling!

A month ago Gary Burgess' editorial in The Daily Universe proposed options for students desiring a "field work" experience in Third World development projects and wondered if student support existed to the extent that an administrative response would be called for.

We applaud Gary's interest in international development and encourage him and similarly interested students to keep the flag waving.

BYU, principally under the auspices of the David M. Kennedy Center for International Studies, has a respectable record in the area of international development and currently administers a program in International Development Studies.

Through the International Internship office, students have participated in Third World development projects in Bolivia, Egypt, Thailand and China.

Projects have included field studies in rural education, rural health needs assessment, teaching English as a second language and development of educational needs and opportunities for minority groups.

One student will begin working in Thailand on May 2 as a student "volunteer" with a refugee organization. Opportunities are available for students with vision and initiative.

Peace Corps, Service Projects and Service Abroad Centers all must be viewed as serious intrusions into the life, customs and mores of our fellow human beings. Quick in-and-out projects, without long term benefits only bring disappointment and disillusionment and perpetuate feelings of helplessness and abandonment which are typical of developing communities around the world.

While many of us want to help our brothers and sisters, we are best advised to prepare well for the experience and wisely choose the projects which meet our personal goals and standards.

The Kennedy Center program in International Development Studies provides the necessary background and preparatory foundation to ensure a successful and positive experience for both student "volunteers" and recipient communities. It should be understood that BYU international development projects are part of academic programs which are supported by students, faculty and administration in departments and colleges.

Professor Berkley Spencer is the chairman and program coordinator of the Master of Arts in International Development Studies.

The curriculum offers both undergraduate and graduate courses in International Development and, as the program grows, will include field study opportunities linked with on-going development organizations and activities.

In 1986, BYU students organized the Student International Development Network, a student chapter of the national organization Overseas Development Network.

On Tuesday students interested in development internships will be meeting at 5 p.m. in 321 MSRB to find out what opportunities are available for those wanting a development internship this summer, either through ODN or other means. Also available as a resource to students is the Internet Corporate Directory of Development Projects, the most comprehensive listing of development opportunities available.

Yes, opportunities are available for students to participate in meaningful international "service projects."

Our institutional response to meeting world needs includes academic preparation, careful selection of worthy projects, sensitivity to the host communities, and energetic student interest and involvement.

Heston in Orem as part of fund-raiser

Charlton Heston came to Orem Friday to see "The Ten Commandments" the way it was originally made and to see the Arnold Friberg paintings from which scenes in the movie were created.

Friberg, also present at the event, said it was an awesome responsibility to try and get the paintings just the way DeMille wanted. All the paintings were done between May and December of the same year. The mural of the parting of the Red Sea took only two and a half weeks.

Heston praised the paintings saying some of them were better than the scenes in the film, particularly the mural of the parting of the Red Sea.

The paintings, special effects mock-ups, audience response cards and an original script, which are part of BYU's Cecil B. DeMille collection, were on display at the SCERA theater in Orem to kick-off fund raising efforts for a proposed cultural arts center.

Heston said the first scene they shot was the burning bush scene where Moses talked with God. The scene was shot on the side of Mount Siani.

"I would not say I saw God, but you can't walk down the side of Mount Sinai in a Levite robe and bare feet and not feel something," Heston said.

Friberg said, "Talent has never poured out of an artist like it did with DeMille. He always wanted the best. He was greater than the legend says he was."

Atlantis lands safely, ending mission

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — Space shuttle Atlantis landed safely on a California desert runway Sunday, completing a secret military mission that included the launch of a $500 million spy satellite.

"Congratulations on a great flight, guys, and welcome back," Mission Control communicator Steve Oswald said.

Atlantis, carrying a crew of five military men, plunged through the Earth's atmosphere in a long fiery dive, flashed over the California coastline north of Los Angeles and touched down at Edwards Air Force base at 10:08 a.m. PST.

With mission commander John O. Creighton at the controls, Atlantis landed smoothly on a dry lakebed runway.

It rolled to a stop 75 seconds later on the center line, ending a 4½-day mission.

Atlantis returned to Earth as a weather front packing high winds moved toward Edwards Air Force Base, threatening unacceptable conditions for the touchdown.

Suspect arrested in SWKT bomb threat

A suspect has been arrested in connection with a Friday incident in the Spencer W. Kimball Tower. Friday, six small fires were set and a bomb threat was called in to University Police. The suspect was arrested after being questioned by University Police Friday evening, but no charges have been filed. She is now in the hospital for observation.

The building was evacuated for more than two hours while police conducted a floor-to-floor search for a bomb. Paul Richards, director of BYU Public Communications, said bomb experts from Salt Lake City and the State Fire Marshall were called in to investigate. No bombs were found.

University Police received the threat at 1:30 p.m. Friday. Brent Harker, assistant director of BYU Public Communications, said the caller was extremely nervous to the point of crying. "She said her friend had set a bomb in the building and had set two fires," he said.

The suspect was in the SWKT when police received the call. "The caller didn't have a friend," Richards said. There were six fires set in five locations. Three of the fires were in women's restrooms in trash baskets. Two were in classrooms. One was set on a piece of carpet near a piano. "In all cases a flammable liquid was placed and lit with a match," Harker said. Custodians found two of the fires before the building was evacuated.

Kohl refuses to accept WWII border

WEST BERLIN — Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany is embroiled in controversy over his refusal to categorically accept the Polish-German border set at the end of World War II.

It has become a political issue; recognition of the boundary could cost Kohl votes in the December West German election. But his failure to renounce any future attempt to regain former territories lost in the war could delay German reunification.

Kohl has come under attack from Poland, from the World War II Allies and from the opposition in West Germany and even in his own Cabinet for failing to give an unequivocal promise on the border.

There have been demonstrations in Poland in support of Polish demands to take part in talks on reunification. But the chancellor faces considerable political risk if he declares the current border inviolable.

Kohl's Christian Democratic Union is running only a couple of percentage points ahead of the opposition Social Democrats in public opinion polls.

LDS Czech's receive full religious rights

SALT LAKE CITY — The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has won official recognition of Czechoslovakia's new democratic government, allowing the Utah-based faith to exercise full religious rights in the former communist nation.

The recognition comes in the wake of a meeting in Prague between three LDS leaders and Czech Deputy Prime Minister Josef Hromadka last month, said church spokesman Jerry Cahill.

"It means we're able to function fully as a church in that nation," he said. "Actually, the recognition is a restoration, if you will. The church had been recognized and we had carried out activities in Czechoslovakia beginning in 1929 through 1950, when we were required to leave. This recognition restores our status."

The Feb. 21 recognition allows the church to buy and sell property and re-establish a mission there, Cahill said.

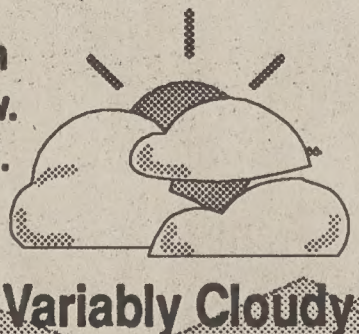

The church also has announced the addition of eight new missions.

A striking Greyhound driver was killed Saturday by a bus

Associated Press

REDDING, Calif. — A striking Greyhound bus driver was killed Saturday when he was pinned against a building by a bus driven by a temporary driver, who fled, police said.

Robert Waterhouse was a 30-year veteran driver, said members of Local 1884 of the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions.

Waterhouse was pinned between the building and the bus, which was leaving the downtown bus terminal at 8:30 a.m., said officer Gary Hughes.

Union members said they tried several times to stop the bus after it hit the man, but it would not stop.

The job market in the 1990s: What does the future hold?

By STEPHEN K. CHRISTIANSEN
Universe Staff Writer

The Dream: With hard work and dedication, anyone can be successful at the job they choose. The Nightmare: Which job do I choose?

The goals of education are many and varied, but one remains a reality. When school is nothing more than a memory, our lives will revolve in part around our jobs. What professions are hot? What are the trends? What looks promising and what doesn't?

Getting advice on career prospects can be a lot like asking economists about the state of the economy — everyone has a different opinion. But the experts agree on certain trends that are shaping the face of the job market.

R. Wayne Hansen, managing director of BYU Placement and Employment Services, is enthusiastic about the big-name companies that visit BYU looking for graduates each year. But he says more often than not, students get hired by smaller companies.

"At the heart of the economy are companies with 30, 40, 50 employees," he said. "So many times we have students get hired by companies we've never even heard of. Many of these kids have a chance to make a real impact in companies this size. Their work can literally make or break them."

Hansen has seen the trends come and go. He says some things have remained constant.

"Things change from year to year," he said, "but some basics stay the same. Some fields have stayed strong for many years — the hard sciences, engineering, the technologies."

"The university is constantly looking at programs. Some that were strong 20 years ago have fallen by the wayside. The agricultural sciences, for example, have been a victim."

At the top of the heap of jobs with a bright future are those in business. J. Russell Sutton, founder of The Center for Human Resources, describes the 1990s as "The Decade of the Entrepreneur" in the College Placement Council Annual. Sutton identifies the skills necessary to make it as a successful entrepreneur:

* A successful attitude that includes the ability to adapt, work hard, be aggressive, and persevere.

* People skills that encompass communications, presence and bearing, and a high energy level.

* Managerial aptitude, that requires creativity, independent judgment and planning.

* Team orientation that uses cooperation, loyalty and employee relations as its base.

Sutton warns that sometimes highly successful entrepreneurs may not be able to manage the business they were successful at starting. This should be a consideration. But for the most part, he's optimistic.

"The climate probably can't get much better," Sutton advises. "So, if entrepreneurship has been an objective on which you have focused for some time, perhaps now is the time to pursue that goal."

U.S. News and World Report notes that specialization is a major trend in the job market these days. Business, science, computers, law, medicine and health-related professions are tending toward tighter job descriptions serving a more narrowly defined sector.

For example, the recent excitement over the environment has led to the need for "environmental engineers" who can work with waste management problems, cleanup projects and contaminated sites.

The Wall Street Journal reports that some attorneys have become so specialized in securities that they have actually entered the market as brokers to the clients they serve.

A contender for the hottest profession is the health-care business. U.S. News notes that "eight of the 25 fastest-growing jobs in the next decade ... will be health-related." This trend reflects an increased national concern for health and an aging population.

seekers unless the two somehow connect. And for BYU students, the services in the Placement Center can help make that connection.

R. Wayne Hansen, managing director of BYU Placement and Employment Services, says the Placement Center, D-240 ASB, is just one of the resources graduating students should use in job hunting. He emphasizes the need to start early in the job search.

"Starting early in one's college career is desirable," Hansen said. "We recommend students start to get out about three semesters before they graduate. It doesn't matter how you do it; more important is that you do something."

"Doing something" can include everything from making lists of potential employers to contacting relatives and BYU graduates to arrange for internships. But for many BYU students, registering with the Placement Center is an integral part of that employment strategy.

The process is simple. Students register by supplying the Center with basic information, such as major, graduation date, location they would like to work. The Placement Center then passes this information on to compatible companies. The companies can either contact the student directly or meet with students in interviews on campus.

In addition, the Placement Center regularly posts lists of visiting companies in more than 25 buildings across campus. Students can check these lists and then sign up for interviews.

"We have about 600 company visits each year," Hansen said. "They conduct in excess of 10,000 interviews. It's big business."

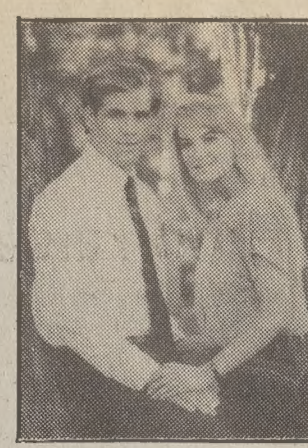

Lloyd E. Hawkins, Placement Center manager, said 3,000 to 5,000 students go through the Placement Center in a year. But it's difficult to estimate just how many students get "placed," because there are different definitions of success in placement.

"When you talk about placement, there are different aspects to placement," Hawkins said. "Some students go on to graduate school, some go into the military, some become housewives; other go on missions, so there are a lot of components to 'job placement' other than just getting a job. We feel successful if we help students fit into the new program or job that's best for them."

"Some students get jobs through placement and don't even realize it. Often we send out data sheets to companies who then contact students and offer them jobs, and the students never even know we were involved. We do a lot of behind-the-scenes work."

Hansen's and Hawkins's description of their work is modest. A visit to the Placement Center is like discovering a gold mine. The Center offers workshops on how to strengthen resumes and how to improve interviewing skills. Copies of virtually every job market newspaper and magazine are available. Permanent information on hundreds of companies is bound in folders or stored on videocassette tapes. Lists of job openings are posted in categories near the Placement Center doors.

Trackster sets record at Wyoming meet, qualifies for nationals

By ANDY BOYCE
Universe Sports Writer

BYU trackster, Kartsi Leppaluoto, set a War Memorial Fieldhouse record as she won the shot put with a throw of 47 feet 8 inches at the Wyoming Last Chance Invitational Saturday in Laramie, Wyo.

Leppaluoto's throw was her best mark of the season and qualified her to compete in the national indoor championships.

Two other Cougar tracksters, Brooke Stanton and Laura Zaugg, placed high in their events while earning their seasonal best times.

Stanton was second in the 55-meter dash as she ran a personal best time of 7.32 seconds while Zaugg also set a personal best in the 55 meters at 8.02 seconds.

In other events, Carolyn Knight was fourth in the 400 meter dash at 59.73. Chris Wilson and Anne Hansen placed third and fifth in the high jump with leaps of 5 feet 7 inches respectively. Wilson had fewer misses.

The men tracksters took the week off to prepare for the national indoor championships next Friday and Saturday in Indianapolis, Ind.

Women cagers end season; down Running Utes, 64-63

By SCOTT NIENDORF
Assistant Sports Editor

The BYU women's basketball team ended its season with a bang Saturday night by defeating the University of Utah, 64-63, in front of 908 vocal fans in the Smith Fieldhouse.

The young Cougars finished an up and down season with a 10-17 record and a 2-8 mark in the High Country Athletic Conference. The Utes dropped to 18-9 on the year and 6-4 in the conference.

The Cougars started slow, scoring just five points in the first eight minutes of the game. Utah jumped to a 14-5 advantage by forcing several BYU turnovers with its full-court pressure. But the Cougars fought back with an 11-3 run, including six free throws by forward Lisa Rathbun, to take a 26-25 lead with 3:59 left in the half.

The Utes scored the last five points of the half to take a 32-30 advantage into the locker room.

The second half was a physical battle between the two teams. The lead changed seven times with both teams fighting back from five-point deficits.

With the score tied at 59, BYU forward Lisa White hit a 3-pointer with 3:04 to go and Nikki Eyre hit two free throws to give the Cougars a five point lead and then held off the Utes for the one-point victory.

Coach Jeanie Wilson said, "It was a defensive battle from beginning to end. My kids just wanted to win so bad. Our attitude going out with a win will be a lot better than with a loss."

BYU's Jennifer Beck said, "I felt like we handled the press better than we have been. The crowd was great, they hyped us up. We're more experienced now so our goals for next year will be a lot higher."

Gymnastics team takes second

By WENDY SECRIST
Universe Sports Writer

After losing one top gymnast to injury in warm-ups, the BYU men's gymnastics team took second place in a tri-meet Saturday in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The University of New Mexico took first place with 268.9. The Cougars scored 266.85 and the Air Force Academy finished third with 252.1.

Coach Mako Sakamoto said Frank Fuchs, BYU's No. 3 all-around competitor, sprained his elbow when warming-up and was unable to compete.

"We had a fair performance. It was hard without Frank — with Frank and a little luck going our way, we could've beat New Mexico," Sakamoto said.

However, several of the teams younger members were able to fill in for events they don't normally compete in.

"The guys responded well — they pitched in and filled in for Frank pretty well," Sakamoto said.

Jason Brown, top all-arounder for BYU, said Fuchs' injury hurt the team. "That kind of cut us. A lot of freshmen did really well, though, and competed really strong. I'm really impressed with the freshmen — we have a pretty young team and we had a lot of freshmen competing well in events they don't normally compete in," said Brown.

Sakamoto said he was pleased with BYU's performance considering the problems the team has had with injuries.

"We've been plagued with injuries. It's a tough sport — we just try to stay healthy and stay away from injuries, but it's hard," said Sakamoto.

Sakamoto said BYU placed first in the rings with 45.5. The Cougars also dominated the high bar event with 44.25 and tied for first on the parallel bars with 45.

Bowling team wins

BYU's mixed recreational bowling team beat defending champion Colorado State University in a Regional Games Tournament at Arizona State over the weekend. "It was a team effort," said coach Shafter Bown, "A total team victory."

A mixed team of two women and two men, a smaller team format than previous years, represented BYU in the two-day competition. "They bowled well," said Bown, "They never lost their composure."

The winner was determined by the highest total pinfalls for the four person teams over nine games. "We beat them (CSU) by 445 pins," said Bown.

BYU's John Downing led the team in personal 9 games totals with 1,556 pinfalls and an average of 174 per game.

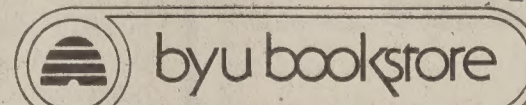

Sheila Cephas was next with 1,530 pinfalls and a 170 average. Ed Martinelli had the highest 3-game series with 552 pinfalls.

Baseball team goes 3-2 in Banana Belt Tournament

By ALEXA A. DAVIS
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU baseball team came away with three wins and two losses in the Banana Belt Tournament over the weekend in Lewiston, Idaho.

In the tournament opener on Thursday afternoon, the Cougars lost 9-6 to the Coyotes of the College of Idaho.

Coach Gary Pullins said, "We didn't really pitch it (the game) well and we didn't really hit it well. We were very impatient, just jumping out at the pitch and not hitting the balls hard. They just outplayed us."

In the nightcap of Thursday's doubleheader, BYU came from behind to beat the defending NAIA National Champion and host team Lewis Clark State 9-6.

After the loss to College of Idaho, BYU was able to capitalize on several Lewis Clark mistakes, which combined with some clutch hitting by Burt Call, allowed a comeback by the Cougars.

Call got a two-run double in the ninth inning to put the game on ice pushing the Cougar lead to 9-6.

"The team showed a lot of character. They came back and battled and beat a very good Lewis Clark team," said Pullins.

Game three for BYU took place Friday afternoon against the College of Eastern Washington.

In seven innings the Cougars played a shut-out game winning over the Eagles 10-0. Senior left-hander Rob Jensen started the game and got his first win as a starter, throwing six shut-out innings. Jensen said he felt more comfortable in the starting position.

"Starting, you can get your mind into the game and prepare for it the night before. I felt a lot more mentally prepared," said Jensen.

"We're delighted to have Robby Jensen pitching as well as he has," said Pullins.

Three home runs highlighted the win for BYU. Jeff Howes, from Fullerton, Calif., and Ralph Obray, from Pocatello, Idaho, hit back-to-back home runs in the fourth inning. Randy Winstead, of St. George hit his sixth home run of the year.

"This game was probably the stellar outing of our season to this point and time. It was our first shut-out," said Pullins.

Saturday, the Cougars split another doubleheader beating Washington State in a close game 3-2, and losing the final game to Portland State 6-2.

Pitcher Mike Switzer started the game against Washington and pitched all nine innings to win the game. His record is now 3-1.

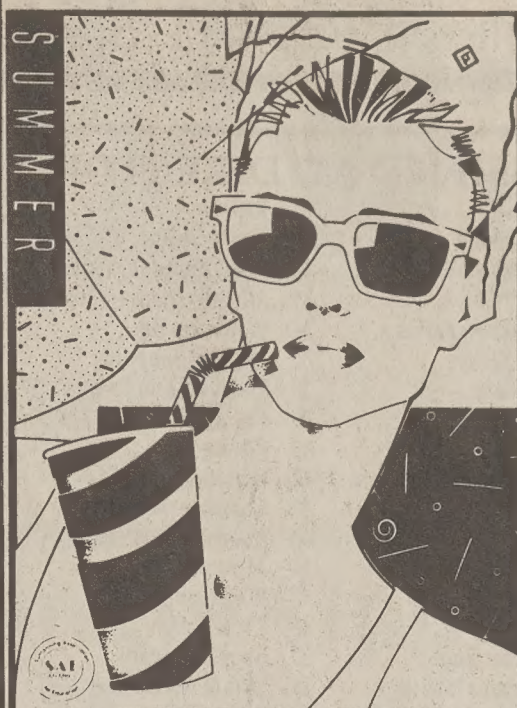

"Seldom have I seen two left-handed pitchers lock horns and just baffle the hitters like McGraw (Washington State pitcher) and Switzer did," said Pullins of the two pitchers.

Call said the Cougars' conclusion of the tournament was a disappointing one as they lost to Portland State 6-2.

The game was tied 2-2 until the second to last inning of the game when Portland scored four runs.

BYU now has a 10-4 record on the season.

Women take fourth in Georgia meet

By WENDY SECRIST
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU women's gymnastics team placed fourth in a six-team competition Saturday at the Bulldog Invitational in Athens, Ga.

The University of Georgia took first place with 191.75 and Utah State University scored 186.9 and placed second. The University of Kentucky barely topped BYU with 185.4. The Cougars' score was 185.2. West Virginia University and The University of North Carolina took fifth and sixth place with 184.05 and 177.5 respectively.

"We did well on the bars and OK on the floor but we had some trouble on the beam. If we could've stayed on the beam we would've been a lot more competitive," said Coach Brad Cattermole.

Cattermole said Georgia is one of the top teams in the nation. "Georgia, (University of) Utah, and (University of) Alabama are three of the best teams I've seen," Cattermole said.

"Georgia is hard to beat on its home court," said Cattermole.

Cattermole said there was "no real reason we had a hard time. Korie (Jackman) and Marianne (Squires) put a lot of pressure on themselves to hit — if they do well, we'll do considerably better," Cattermole said.

Cattermole said he is hoping that Shauna Mertz, who is recovering from a knee injury, will be able to compete at the next meet. "Having Shauna back next time should help out a lot."

BYU will be counting on scores from the next few meets to be used as regional qualifying scores, said Cattermole. "Last year, most of the scores we counted came at the end of March."

The BYU women's gymnastics team is scheduled to compete against Utah State University for the third time this season Friday at 7 p.m. in the Smith Fieldhouse.

BYU lost to Utah State by one point in Logan Feb. 12 and scored 1.7 points below Utah State Saturday.

Jazz lead division by three

By BRETT A. BLAKE
Universe Sports Writer

Karl Malone and John Stockton combined to score 58 points to lead the Utah Jazz to a 112-98 win over the second place San Antonio Spurs. Utah now holds a three-game lead in the Midwest Division.

"Stockton and Malone are two of the very best," said San Antonio coach Larry Brown.

Stockton shot 9-10 from the field, 2-2 from behind the 3-point line and 3-4 from the foul line to end the game with 22 points and 20 assists. Karl Malone led the Jazz with 36 points and 15 rebounds.

"I thought John had a great game," said Jazz coach Jerry Sloan. Stockton and Malone are always consistent contributors. "You can always set your watch by those guys," said Sloan.

The Spurs scored first with a lay-up from Sean Elliot to Willie Anderson to take an early 2-0 lead. Utah bounced back scoring the next 10 points. The Jazz opened the floor scoring 18 points on lay-ups and finished the period with a 34-20 advantage.

Utah came out strong and extended its lead 44-27 early in the second period. But the Spurs took a timeout and came back to score the next 10 points and slowly ate away at the Jazz lead.

San Antonio's Terry Cummings dumped in 12 points to help the Spurs narrow Utah's lead 54-51 at half.

Foul trouble plagued Malone and Anderson in the third period. Anderson and Malone sat out most of the quarter with four fouls.

Malone took over in the fourth period scoring 15 points and pulling down seven rebounds as the Jazz rolled to a 14 point win.

The Jazz are now 41-16 on the season.

Wilson Diamonds is a wonderful place.

I thought choosing an engagement ring would be difficult. I wanted quality and selection but my fiancé wanted a wholesale price. Wilson Diamonds satisfied us both.

They taught us politely and completely how to recognize quality and prices. What a refreshing change. It's no wonder Wilson's has been in business so long.

Job 'headhunters' can be risky

By THOMAS M. USERY
Universe Staff Writer

In some highly competitive job markets winning the talent contest for the best jobs can be dangerous for the seeker, as unscrupulous "headhunters" seek to make money from the unwary.

An employment service that specializes in specific areas of employment such as data processing personnel is often referred to as a headhunter.

Headhunters flourish because they are able to circumvent and bypass corporate personnel offices, which usually are out of their depth when it comes to evaluating the resumes of technical personnel, said Janet Ruhl, author of "The Programmer's Survival Guide."

When a headhunter places a job hunter, he gets paid a percentage of the new employee's yearly salary by the hiring company, and most people know this, Ruhl said. "What they often don't know is how large a percentage the headhunter gets. Usually it is 1 percent per thousand of your new salary up to some cutoff, usually 30 percent."

"That means if you are placed in a $30,000-a-year job the headhunter is getting $9,000, which is then subdivided between the owners of the head hunting company and the salesman who made the placement."

It is because of this large amount of money to be made that headhunters can be so dangerous, Ruhl said. "Some companies pop up like mushrooms after a rain."

According to Ruhl, less-reputable firms engage in all sorts of creative maneuvers to get their hands on programming flesh.

An Infosystems magazine article tells of headhunters calling up managers and pretending to be watch repairmen, claiming to have lost the last name of a programmer who dropped off a watch to be repaired, just to get the names of people in the department so that they can be called later and offered a job.

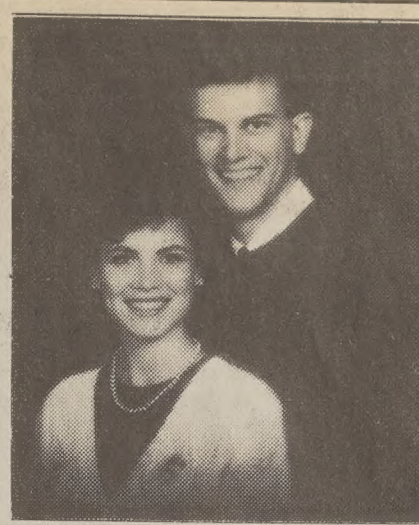

The article also reported that managers must maintain an uneasy alliance with headhunters, because when a job opens up the headhunters are often their only source for qualified personnel.

According to Ruhl there are four questions you should ask yourself when dealing with headhunters:

1. Is this a firm that specializes in your job market and whose salespersons are knowledgeable about your field of expertise?
2. How long has the firm been in business?
3. Does the headhunter suggest inappropriate jobs to you at the interview?
4. Do you know anyone who has used this firm and been happy with the results?

Ruhl said a headhunter should be treated with the same circumspection as used car salesmen.

Employers look for qualified students

By FRED LOWRY
Universe Staff Writer

As students prepare to leave school and move into the work force they should be aware of qualities employers look for that can't be taught in the classroom, said the Senior Vice President of Human Resources for Novell Inc.

"A person needs to be able to communicate and be a team player in a work setting. And these are qualities which can't be taught," said Tim Harris.

"If a person can't inter work with people in a professional setting, they won't make a contribution," he said.

Harris said students who have worked in a professional setting have an advantage when the time comes to adapt to a full-time job. A professional setting is a foreign environment for a person who enters the work force for the first time, he said.

"If a person can work during the summer or be involved in a co-op, they will be able to adapt and work in the setting as if it is home," he said.

According to the 1989-90 College Placement Council Annual, a co-op is on-the-job-training with an employer. In a co-op, a person does work related to one's career interests using the knowledge and skills learned in college. A co-op is different from an internship in that a student continues to work for an employer throughout their college education.

Novell Inc. offers co-ops and internships and Harris said they are beneficial because when a student begins full-time work "there won't be a period of uncomfortableness or orientation to the setting." Being able to adapt in any setting, will work for a person whether they are working for Novell, IBM, AT&T or any company, he said.

R. Wayne Hansen, director of BYU Placement Services, said students should do something other than academic experience, such as internships or co-ops.

"Internships and co-ops supplement a students schooling with a little bit of reality," he said. "Those who have done internships or co-ops have

BYU Ethics Symposium features professionals

By CAROL YAGER
Universe Staff Writer

There is no more appropriate place to study ethics than at BYU, said Julie Sakamaki, director for BYU's Ethics Symposium.

BYUSA is sponsoring this week's annual Ethics Symposium. The Symposium is designed to make BYU students aware of ethical issues in numerous professional fields.

BYUSA has combined efforts this year with university colleges and departments to get speakers with experience and expertise, said Peter Cowley, BYUSA assistant vice president over Ethics Symposium.

Speakers include high-profile professionals from numerous areas currently under ethical controversy. Areas include business, communications, medicine, government and the military.

Ron Malouf, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Malouf Company Inc., will speak today at 11 a.m. in the ELWC Varsity Theater. He will speak on ethics in business. Malouf Company, Inc. is a manufacturer of women's ready-to-wear clothing headquartered in Dallas.

Tuesday at 11 a.m. in the ELWC Varsity Theater, James "Bo" Gritz, an intelligence operator for the U.S.

Government will speak on ethics in government and military. Gritz has been Commander of Southeast Asian field rescue missions "Grand Eagle," "Velvet Hammer," and "Operation Lazarus" with the objective of liberating American POWs.

There will be two speakers on Wednesday addressing ethics in communications. Jack Anderson, a syndicated columnist for the Washington Post, will speak at 11 a.m. in the ELWC Varsity Theater.

Jack Adamson, president of KSL Radio and Television and senior vice president of Bonneville International Corporation, will speak at 1 p.m. in the ELWC Memorial Lounge.

Thursday at 11 a.m. in the ELWC Varsity Theater, a panel discussion covering ethics in medicine will be directed by Dr. David Green.

Concluding the week's symposium, Howard Ruff, a key figure in American politics and economics, will address ethics in business. He will speak Friday at 11 a.m. in the ELWC Varsity Theater.

Ethics Symposium will focus on professional ethical dilemmas and issues. "Ethics is a subject pertinent to all of us, especially those students going into professional fields," said Cowley.

touched the practical. They are much more marketable."

Hansen said many students are so busy with part-time jobs, homework, church and family, that the last thing they work on is finding a job. "When really it (finding a job) should be one of the first," he said.

"Students ought not to wait to plan for jobs after college," Hansen said.

Harris said when students are looking for summer employment, they should try to find jobs in their career related fields, because it will show a potential employer they have interest and have already been oriented in the field. Also, he said students a lot of the time think they know what career they want to become involved in without even working in the particular area. He said it is essential for a student to have career-related work experience to ensure themselves they want to remain in the field. A person needs to know their performance and commitment, he said.

However, Harris said employment in any area is important, because it gives a preview of what a working environment will be, and shows an employer the person knows how to work. He also said a student's education should not be overlooked, because it is needed and is very important.

Caryn Crandall, assistant in personnel at WordPerfect Corporation said the need for education depends on the type of job. She said the criteria for hiring in computer support areas doesn't include college education but more importantly computer experience and knowledge of WordPerfect products.

She said the only areas WordPerfect requires a college degree is in the writing and programming areas because, "We can't teach a person to write or program."

Ecclesiastical endorsement defended by Elder Packer

By JOHN D. BEAMAN
Universe Staff Writer

The First Presidency of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints want to "ensure that students who are active members of the church are not excluded through enrollment ceilings while inactive members enjoy the blessings of attending church schools," said Elder Boyd K. Packer a member of the Council of The Twelve Apostles Sunday at the Marriott Center.

"Students who do not have these (ecclesiastical) endorsements may not register for University and college classes. The Board of Education and the Board of Trustees is now struggling to update our policy of admissions. We have no choice but to make some adjustments to accommodate the growth of the church," said Elder Packer.

He said, "The Board of Trustees has no choice but to enforce these policies and they are not free to do otherwise."

"Entrance requirements cannot be based on grades alone; church schools are not solely for the academically gifted," said Elder Packer.

According to Elder Packer, in a public institution trustees are responsible to the tax payer. "As trustees of the church we are responsible to the tithe payers and to the Lord. As such we must balance the funds of the church so that the central mission of the church is accomplished."

He said those who are now seniors came to BYU with church membership at 5.9 million. With those who are now freshmen the membership has increased to 7.2 million. When these freshmen graduate church membership will be at 9 million.

Thousands of these members dream of being admitted at BYU but most cannot simply because of enrollment ceilings and limited space and funds, Elder Packer said.

"Enrollment at the university remains constant; it cannot grow as the church grows and the growth of the church cannot be held back," he said.

Elder Boyd K. Packer

The First Presidency has counseled youth to attend a college or school near their home. "If there's an institute of Religion there we encourage them to attend," Elder Packer said.

The LDS church now has Institutes of Religion in 1,711 colleges and universities across the world. These institutes enroll 126,000 students.

Elder Packer said, "How painful it is for us to see so many worthy for whom there is no room."

Students are encouraged to walk by faith and take council from courage rather than their fears, he said, walking by faith requires the courage to see beyond the moment and accept the council of the Church leaders.

"Many People want to see the end from the beginning. You must have courage to walk a few steps into the unknown then the light will appear," Elder Packer said.
